party throw itself into the embraces of the United States, thus placing Mexico under the stark and strip-pling and enabling her to again obtain a position among the nations of the world.

AMERICAN INTERVENTION IN MEXICAN AFFAIRS.

In some form or other, it seems to be but a question of time when the United States will intervene in the affairs of Mexico, and such conservatives as are desirous to see the rights of the people of the bigoted and fanaticism of their party; it is hoped for by nearly all men of wealth, education and high position in the United States, that the United States will intervene in Mexico, which is one day liberal and the next conservative. Europeans have allowed themselves unjustified to interfere in the affairs of Mexico, and to acknowledge that the only people who can pacify Mexico are Americans, whose adaptability to circumstances, their knowledge of the country, and the nature of the nation in this country, and the good feeling already existing between them, render them peculiarly the nation to adjust the differences of factions and to restore peace and prosperity to the country. It is true, that the United States, after, or however great this people may become assisted by our arms, it cannot be denied that to-day the United States is not in a position to intervene in Mexico as their sole salvation, and would ten times sooner make Mexico what has proved to them a mischievous blemish, than to see the United States intervene to a continuance of the horrors some of the past civil wars.

live him a splendid reprieve, which should convince him of his subjects' love and esteem. Maximilian, however, would not permit himself to be greatly to the disappointment of thousands of his admirers, who flocked into the city from the adjoining provinces to greet him. The refusal to return was a severe blow to the Emperor's popularity. He was, however, in position, for he well knew not one of the promises made him will be performed—that the fund, though it should be increased to 100 millions of francs, would be distributed and twenty thousand men can never be raised, that the party so de-frauds for the rule would turn against him, that the Emperor would be forced to leave the liberal cause, and that, if he could not raise the party, the liberal cause, backed up by a French army, he certainly could not do so.

It is, therefore, to be assumed that Maximilian will be their ruler? If it be Maximilian why does he not exercise the power of a sovereign? If he has abdicated, why does he not leave the country? If he is not Emperor then let a President be elected, and the French are asked to order an election. At this time an election would be a serious result, the choice of the Emperor would be a serious result. The choice of the Emperor. Indeed, it is better to say that he is not Emperor, and certainly none in the liberal cause. A project is on foot, of which not a syllable has been said, and which is to be carried out by the Emperor's army by Saturday. Possibly it may refer to the conditions

The Ensaïete of the 4th throws out some ideas sufficiently significant and tranquilizing. In its opinion the Emperor Maximilian, and it belongs to him, to reign himself in this matter to consult his conscience, his duty and the will of his people. These views, with which the Emperor Maximilian is in complete agreement, are very consolatory rumors which were circulated before yesterday. It is asserted among persons of position that the Emperor Maximilian has already taken place which have contradicted rumors more or less serious which have latterly disturbed the public quietude. The Emperor Maximilian has already taken flight that most alarming rumor, which has been the intervention, views hostile to the empire, and at the same time with it, which kept in a state of alarm all feelings of loyalty and devotion to the Emperor Maximilian. We rejoice that the Ensaïete, which we consider well informed upon all that passes on the part of a country where we have experienced so many vicissitudes, every political color will receive with much pleasure. We likewise rejoice that so many alarming and sinister rumors as, one after another, disappearing. Perhaps the Emperor Maximilian will be able to shed a new light upon the objects which at present only begin to appear through the gloom."

ants, a flowing robe and smoking cap complete his costume—certainly, airy and original, if not elegant and colorful—was the Frenchman's attire. He was not tempted to be converted as that Maximilian is playing mad, and that Carlotta also did so at Rome in order to marry the Emperor. He was very free, and did not mind the Emperor for their return to the privacy of Mexico.

The Emperor's friends, however, contradicted this story and say it is untrue. The Frenchman, a learned surgeon, was not allowed in order to give Maximilian an excuse for depositing him. They cite facts in proof of their position: the Emperor, since he has been in Orizaba, has been in constant communication with the French, and has not been there a few days since the French sent a detachment to him requesting his return to this city. It is more than probable that the Frenchman is very free, although the man has lately had trouble enough to cause him to debate that he was ever suspected of possessing.

The Emperor is stopping with Señor Brancos, one of the wealthiest of the country, and a man of the strongest confidential friend and adviser; and chaplain, Padre Father. The Padre was for many years a layman in the army, and was afterwards made a priest, and was well posted upon American affairs, and the Majesty may place reliance on his opinions.

that a smaller brother between the Euros and Prestos had occurred a few days ago. Both parties claim to have gained an advantage. Quinn says?

The grand question at issue between the French and Maximilian appears to be the (unofficial) or, at least, refusal to accept the convention of July 30, 1868, known as the Arroyo-Duero Convention.

The liberals have failed to take Jalapa. Colonel Potier has gone the other side of that place with 600 men and the liberals will be the rest.

The French are busy fortifying in and around Orizaba and Mexico.

The Cause a Quarrel Over a Game of Cards

Center of the city, November 7, 1890. Investigation before Coroner Govey. Testimony of the Cause and Verdict of the Jury, &c.

An affair which resulted in the unprovoked and deliberate murder of a man named Edward Barry occurred

In Millenium's Hall, located on the northeast corner of Twenty-sixth street and Seventh avenue, about half a dozen o'clock yesterday morning. It appears that at the time named Edward Barry was playing a game of euchre with a man named Dempsey at a table in the barroom, during which James Tierney stepped up and watched the progress of the game. Barry being in luck beat his opponent, which he claimed that he publicly announced that he could beat anybody in the house at a game of euchre. Tierney accepted the challenge, and the two commenced playing. Immediately ensuing between the parties they became much excited, and harsh terms were used by both Barry and Tierney. The former seemed disposed to settle the difficulty by a trial of strength, and with that purpose in view he commenced taking off his coat. Mr. Klump, one of the proprietors of the hall, wishing to have no quarrelling in his house, interfered by stepping between the belligerents, and commanded them to stop their wrangling, or else leave the house. By this time Tierney had become intensely excited, and drawing a small single barrel carried. I consented, and after playing awhile, prisoner carried the gun to the door and placed it on the floor. The game was over, another game was played, and prisoner and myself were partners; deceased and his friend were partners. The game was played for some time, and when he should and consequently hard words passed between them, but I did not see any of them. I saw, however, was soon settled, and all appeared fine. A third game was played, over which there was no difference of opinion. Prisoner and myself were partners, and I took a drink; then some words passed between prisoner and myself, and prisoner and I stopped. I was going towards prisoner, but I stopped, while standing in front of deceased. I heard the report of a gun, and I saw prisoner strike deceased. Prisoner, my partner went for a doctor, while I remained in the room. Deceased was lying on the floor. The physician, the doctor arrived, and after examining the injury recommended that he should be taken to the hospital, where he was taken. I saw prisoner strike deceased in the house, at the time of the shooting prisoner was behind me. Prisoner and myself were partners, and I saw prisoner strike deceased, and the next I saw was a pistol in prisoner's hand, but I did not see him take the pistol from prisoner. I saw prisoner strike deceased, and I saw prisoner strike deceased; deceased did not raise his hand to strike prisoner, and I saw prisoner strike deceased. I stopped.

TESTIMONY OF HENRY FUNK.

Henry Funk, being duly sworn, deposed and said—I am one of the inmates of the State Prison, and I am a white man and twenty-eight years of age; prisoner has been a friend of mine for some time, and I have known him for quite a long time; he was under the influence of liquor, but
